

Biology - Institute of Biology Quiz

From left to right Jean Wilson Institute Of Biology (North Western Region Branch Chairman), Angela Holden, LGGS pupils (the winning team), Adam Timmins (Head of Membership Institute of Biology) and Mr R Pim (Head of Biology)

Lancaster Girls Grammar School (LGGS) recently entered a team into the annual Institute of Biology quiz. This annual event is held at the University of Central Lancashire (UCLAN) in Preston and features top school scientists from across the North West of Britain.

This year twenty five top schools were entered including Independents, Grammars and Sixth form colleges and competed for the coveted prize of a £500 microscope, a set of high quality microscope lenses, a set of 100 prepared slides and a selection of books. Once again LGGS girls walked away with the top prize. This is the third year in a row that LGGS have won this competition and the team took particular pleasure in beating Manchester Boys Grammar into second place.

The Organizers commented on “the excellent knowledge and understanding displayed by the team and how effectively they worked as a team.”

“They worked calmly under pressure of time and challenging questions and are a credit to your school.”